

The Second Day is a touching and inspirational documentary film about the students and educators at “Ground Zero” area schools who experienced first-hand the tragic events of September 11, 2001 in New York City.

Directed by 14-year-old filmmaker Brook Peters, then a member the kindergarten class at P.S. 150 Tribeca Learning Center, who also has grown up around the FDNY, the documentary continues to shed emotional light on the manic moments of that fateful September morning via Brook's interviews with classmates, students, teachers, faculty, counselors, and the FDNY Captain. The film also depicts the ultimate resilience of these students and educators in the event's 10-year aftermath.
